“ Chris and I were good friends during the time we both worked at Polyclinic Med Center in Harrisburg in the early 1980's. She was a kind, caring, compassionate and highly skilled nurse who was devoted to her patients as well as her family. She had a wonderful sense of humor and upbeat, outgoing and optimistic personality and outlook on life, often with a vivacious smile on her face and a cheerful greeting to all who she came in contact with. Although I moved out of State after I left Polyclinic, and hadn't seen or spoken with her in many years, I never forgot the special memories we made and the time we spent together, both professionally and personally. My sincere condolences go to her family, professional colleagues at the various hospitals and med. centers that Chris was affiliated with over the years, and all her many friends. She was a beautiful person and helped many seriously ill patients entrusted to her care over the years. Although her life was sadly cut short, she made a difference in the lives of many, including my own and I will always remember her kindness and friendship. RIP, Chris - you were an angel on Earth and are now with the angels in Heaven.
