“ Cindy and I were not only 1st cousins but best friends for the first 11 years of my life. She was only 3 months older than I but very outgoing as I was shy then. We spent every day together we could. We got lost playing in the woods behind her home. We were in the same class at school from 1st grade through 5th. Then the teachers said we had to be separated. We went to the shore and were locked out of the room we rented because we returned after 1 am..

We went to Times Square to see the ball drop on New Years Eve 1969. So many more memories. I admired her courage and strength. She had very strong faith. She is at peace,

“ To Karen, Kris and family. I have so many memories with Aunt Cindy. I'm choosing to share one that everytime we talked about it, it made us laugh harder than the 1st time.

It is regarding driving.

Mommom and I had driven to Virginia to visit the Virginia gang. At the time, I had recently had 2 accidents; jokingly some told me to be careful with Mommom.

Aunt Cindy was a careful driver, drove the speed limit etc.. About a week before we left for VA, Aunt Cindy drove Mommom and myself to the cemetary to visit my Dad and Poppop's graves. Well the whole way Mommom complained about Aunt Cindy's driving- which by the way was excellent.(I guess it's a Mom and Daughter thing).

So when we returned from our Virginia trip (by the way- i drove over the speed limit for most of the trip) ; Aunt Cindy asked Mommom how the drive was, Mommom's reply was, "Becky is an excellent driver, I felt very safe- much safer than when I drive with you."

When Aunt Cindy told me she had said that, we both burst into laughter. From there on out, Aunt Cindy and I laughed at that many many times.

There are so many memories that I could share but this one seemed appropriate because it was special between her and me and it almost became funnier whenever we joked about it.

What I learned from Aunt Cindy is that when you have Faith and Trusti n God everything always works out- even if it's not what you thought was beat, He knows what is best.

I love you so much Aunt Cindy❤️
